History of Paulding County Carnegie Library

The library was open for business on March 3, 1916, with 4000 books. The building was constructed of fireproof and slow burning materials, French gray pressed brick and Indiana Bedford stone with a green tile roof. The architects were Howard and Merriam of Columbus, Ohio. These architects also designed the Hayes Presidential Library in Fremont, Ohio.

The library was placed on the National Registry of Historic Places in 1985. In 2003 the library received an Ohio Bicentennial Historical marker in recognition of it being the first county library funded by the Andrew Carnegie Foundation.

Storytimes introduce young children to the excitement of books, allow them to gather and interact as a group and also provides ideas for parents and caregivers to try at home when reading aloud to their child. The parent/caregiver is the child's first reading teacher. Children's librarians are part of that early literacy partnership.

BATTLE OF THE BOOKS

For over twenty-five years, the Paulding County Carnegie Library (PCCL) has sponsored and coordinated a county-wide reading competition called Battle of the Books. Fifth and sixth-grade teams made up of up to six students read twenty-five books and are then quizzed during a competition first at the school level and then at the county level for the championship. Each school library receives up to ten new books each year.
